Newfoundland Company on International Stage

(St. John's, NL, Canada) - This week, the world's largest natural gas technology conference and trade show, "GasTech 2008", takes place in Bangkok, Thailand. This biannual event attracts thousands of delegates from hundreds of companies worldwide. This year's event will feature a presentation by Michael Hanrahan, Managing Director of Centre for Marine CNG Inc., on the unique position Newfoundland & Labrador holds with respect to frontier natural gas research and development.

"It is an honour to be the only Canadian speaker at GasTech and to have the unprecedented opportunity to boast about the men and women with whom I work," stated Hanrahan. "Newfoundland & Labrador is globally recognized for its rich natural resources offshore and the human resources working everyday to support the oil & gas industry."

The Centre for Marine CNG Inc. is an independent research and development company located in St. John's. The Centre provides engineering, technical and economic advice to an international customer base; research & development services; and operates a full service analytical laboratory.
